

Trips: Trips - 6

HS L 179:73

National Library
of Sweden

Dag Hammarskjöld's saml.

D. H. trips 1958 March 24

Note to correspondence (Sec. Gen. in Finland / USSR)

L 779:73

(The following was received today from the UN Information Center in Copenhagen.)

At a press conference in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold said, among other things, that it was futile to speculate on which matters would be taken up in Moscow. "Nothing is excluded and nothing has priority," he said.

The Secretary-General went on to say that he expected useful discussions on matters of mutual interest. He reiterated that there was no agenda for the Moscow discussions.

Asked whether he intended to discuss the return of the Soviet Union to the Disarmament Commission, the Secretary-General said, "The reply is obvious."

He stated further that "the disarmament question is probably the one that is foremost within the United Nations, and we cannot allow ourselves to get stuck in a question of form without trying to find a way out."

Replying to a question as to whether the United Nations Emergency Force was the nucleus of an international army, the Secretary-General said that "those who originally were skeptical about the UNEF in the Middle East are now convinced. The operation has simply succeeded." But he reminded the questioner that UNEF was not the force envisaged in the Charter.

* * * * *

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

NOTE No. 1761
24 March 1958

(The following was received today from the UN Information Center in Copenhagen.)

At a press conference in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld said, among other things, that it was futile to speculate on which matters would be taken up in Moscow. "Nothing is excluded and nothing has priority," he said.

The Secretary-General went on to say that he expected useful discussions on matters of mutual interest. He reiterated that there was no agenda for the Moscow discussions.

Asked whether he intended to discuss the return of the Soviet Union to the Disarmament Commission, the Secretary-General said, "The reply is obvious."

He stated further that "the disarmament question is probably the one that is foremost within the United Nations, and we cannot allow ourselves to get stuck in a question of form without trying to find a way out."

Replying to a question as to whether the United Nations Emergency Force was the nucleus of an international army, the Secretary-General said that "those who originally were skeptical about the UNEF in the Middle East are now convinced. The operation has simply succeeded." But he reminded the questioner that UNEF was not the force envisaged in the Charter.

* *** *

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

NOTE No. 1761
24 March 1958

(The following was received today from the UN Information Center in Copenhagen.)

At a press conference in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld said, among other things, that it was futile to speculate on which matters would be taken up in Moscow. "Nothing is excluded and nothing has priority," he said.

The Secretary-General went on to say that he expected useful discussions on matters of mutual interest. He reiterated that there was no agenda for the Moscow discussions.

Asked whether he intended to discuss the return of the Soviet Union to the Disarmament Commission, the Secretary-General said, "The reply is obvious."

He stated further that "the disarmament question is probably the one that is foremost within the United Nations, and we cannot allow ourselves to get stuck in a question of form without trying to find a way out."

Replying to a question as to whether the United Nations Emergency Force was the nucleus of an international army, the Secretary-General said that "those who originally were skeptical about the UNEF in the Middle East are now convinced. The operation has simply succeeded." But he reminded the questioner that UNEF was not the force envisaged in the Charter.

* * * * *

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

NOTE No. 1761
24 March 1958

(The following was received today from the UN Information Center in Copenhagen.)

At a press conference in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold said, among other things, that it was futile to speculate on which matters would be taken up in Moscow. "Nothing is excluded and nothing has priority," he said.

The Secretary-General went on to say that he expected useful discussions on matters of mutual interest. He reiterated that there was no agenda for the Moscow discussions.

Asked whether he intended to discuss the return of the Soviet Union to the Disarmament Commission, the Secretary-General said, "The reply is obvious."

He stated further that "the disarmament question is probably the one that is foremost within the United Nations, and we cannot allow ourselves to get stuck in a question of form without trying to find a way out."

Replying to a question as to whether the United Nations Emergency Force was the nucleus of an international army, the Secretary-General said that "those who originally were skeptical about the UNEF in the Middle East are now convinced. The operation has simply succeeded." But he reminded the questioner that UNEF was not the force envisaged in the Charter.

* *** *

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

NOTE No. 1761
24 March 1958

(The following was received today from the UN Information Center in Copenhagen.)

At a press conference in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold said, among other things, that it was futile to speculate on which matters would be taken up in Moscow. "Nothing is excluded and nothing has priority," he said.

The Secretary-General went on to say that he expected useful discussions on matters of mutual interest. He reiterated that there was no agenda for the Moscow discussions.

Asked whether he intended to discuss the return of the Soviet Union to the Disarmament Commission, the Secretary-General said, "The reply is obvious."

He stated further that "the disarmament question is probably the one that is foremost within the United Nations, and we cannot allow ourselves to get stuck in a question of form without trying to find a way out."

Replying to a question as to whether the United Nations Emergency Force was the nucleus of an international army, the Secretary-General said that "those who originally were skeptical about the UNEF in the Middle East are now convinced. The operation has simply succeeded." But he reminded the questioner that UNEF was not the force envisaged in the Charter.

* * * * *

(The following was received today from the UN Information Center in Copenhagen.)

At a press conference in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold said, among other things, that it was futile to speculate on which matters would be taken up in Moscow. "Nothing is excluded and nothing has priority," he said.

The Secretary-General went on to say that he expected useful discussions on matters of mutual interest. He reiterated that there was no agenda for the Moscow discussions.

Asked whether he intended to discuss the return of the Soviet Union to the Disarmament Commission, the Secretary-General said, "The reply is obvious."

He stated further that "the disarmament question is probably the one that is foremost within the United Nations, and we cannot allow ourselves to get stuck in a question of form without trying to find a way out."

Replying to a question as to whether the United Nations Emergency Force was the nucleus of an international army, the Secretary-General said that "those who originally were skeptical about the UNEF in the Middle East are now convinced. The operation has simply succeeded." But he reminded the questioner that UNEF was not the force envisaged in the Charter.

* * * * *

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

NOTE No. 1761
24 March 1958

(The following was received today from the UN Information Center in Copenhagen.)

At a press conference in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjöld said, among other things, that it was futile to speculate on which matters would be taken up in Moscow. "Nothing is excluded and nothing has priority," he said.

The Secretary-General went on to say that he expected useful discussions on matters of mutual interest. He reiterated that there was no agenda for the Moscow discussions.

Asked whether he intended to discuss the return of the Soviet Union to the Disarmament Commission, the Secretary-General said, "The reply is obvious."

He stated further that "the disarmament question is probably the one that is foremost within the United Nations, and we cannot allow ourselves to get stuck in a question of form without trying to find a way out."

Replying to a question as to whether the United Nations Emergency Force was the nucleus of an international army, the Secretary-General said that "those who originally were skeptical about the UNEF in the Middle East are now convinced. The operation has simply succeeded." But he reminded the questioner that UNEF was not the force envisaged in the Charter.

* *** *

Note No. 1763
24 March 1958

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

(The following was received here from the UN Information Center in Moscow.)

On the arrival of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), he was received at the airport by Foreign Minister P.J. Hynninen of Finland and other high officials.

Later, President Urho Kekkonen gave a luncheon for him, with Prime Minister Rainer von Fieandt and Foreign Minister Hynninen present.

The United Nations Association of Finland held a reception for the Secretary-General, and there was a short press conference (see Note to Correspondents No. 1761).

The Secretary-General and his party left Helsinki at 7:20 p.m. and arrived in Moscow at 11:30 p.m.

He was received by Vassily V. Kuznetsov, First Deputy Foreign Minister of the Soviet Union; by Alexander V. Topchiev, Academician, Chief Scientific Secretary of the Academy of Sciences of the Soviet Union and President of the United Nations Association of the Soviet Union; by Semyon K. Tsarapkin, Director of the Department of International Organizations in the Foreign Ministry; by Feodor F. Molochkov, Chief of Protocol in the Foreign Ministry, and by Sergei G. Bratchikov, Director of the United Nations Information Center in Moscow.

The Secretary-General's program for today (24 March) included visits to Mr. Kuznetsov and to Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, and, in the afternoon, to Nikita S. Khrushchev, First Secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and Member of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR.

Mr. Kuznetsov is giving a luncheon for the Secretary-General today, and Foreign Minister Gromyko, tomorrow.

* *** *

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

NOTE No. 1761
24 March 1958

(The following was received today from the UN Information Center in Copenhagen.)

At a press conference in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold said, among other things, that it was futile to speculate on which matters would be taken up in Moscow. "Nothing is excluded and nothing has priority," he said.

The Secretary-General went on to say that he expected useful discussions on matters of mutual interest. He reiterated that there was no agenda for the Moscow discussions.

Asked whether he intended to discuss the return of the Soviet Union to the Disarmament Commission, the Secretary-General said, "The reply is obvious."

He stated further that "the disarmament question is probably the one that is foremost within the United Nations, and we cannot allow ourselves to get stuck in a question of form without trying to find a way out."

Replying to a question as to whether the United Nations Emergency Force was the nucleus of an international army, the Secretary-General said that "those who originally were skeptical about the UNEF in the Middle East are now convinced. The operation has simply succeeded." But he reminded the questioner that UNEF was not the force envisaged in the Charter.

* *** *

Note No. 1763
24 March 1958

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

(The following was received here from the UN Information Center in Moscow.)

On the arrival of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), he was received at the airport by Foreign Minister P.J. Hynninen of Finland and other high officials.

Later, President Urho Kekkonen gave a luncheon for him, with Prime Minister Rainer von Fieandt and Foreign Minister Hynninen present.

The United Nations Association of Finland held a reception for the Secretary-General, and there was a short press conference (see Note to Correspondents No. 1761).

The Secretary-General and his party left Helsinki at 7:20 p.m. and arrived in Moscow at 11:30 p.m.

He was received by Vassily V. Kuznetsov, First Deputy Foreign Minister of the Soviet Union; by Alexander V. Topchiev, Academician, Chief Scientific Secretary of the Academy of Sciences of the Soviet Union and President of the United Nations Association of the Soviet Union; by Semyon K. Tsarapkin, Director of the Department of International Organizations in the Foreign Ministry; by Feodor F. Molochkov, Chief of Protocol in the Foreign Ministry, and by Sergei G. Bratchikov, Director of the United Nations Information Center in Moscow.

The Secretary-General's program for today (24 March) included visits to Mr. Kuznetsov and to Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, and, in the afternoon, to Nikita S. Khrushchev, First Secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and Member of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR.

Mr. Kuznetsov is giving a luncheon for the Secretary-General today, and Foreign Minister Gromyko, tomorrow.

* * * * *

Note No. 1763
24 March 1958

NOTE TO CORRESPONDENTS

(The following was received here from the UN Information Center in Moscow.)

On the arrival of Secretary-General Dag Hammarskjold in Helsinki yesterday (23 March), he was received at the airport by Foreign Minister P.J. Hynninen of Finland and other high officials.

Later, President Urho Kekkonen gave a luncheon for him, with Prime Minister Rainer von Fieandt and Foreign Minister Hynninen present.

The United Nations Association of Finland held a reception for the Secretary-General, and there was a short press conference (see Note to Correspondents No. 1761).

The Secretary-General and his party left Helsinki at 7:20 p.m. and arrived in Moscow at 11:30 p.m.

He was received by Vassily V. Kuznetsov, First Deputy Foreign Minister of the Soviet Union; by Alexander V. Topchiev, Academician, Chief Scientific Secretary of the Academy of Sciences of the Soviet Union and President of the United Nations Association of the Soviet Union; by Semyon K. Tsarapkin, Director of the Department of International Organizations in the Foreign Ministry; by Feodor F. Molochkov, Chief of Protocol in the Foreign Ministry, and by Sergei G. Bratchikov, Director of the United Nations Information Center in Moscow.

The Secretary-General's program for today (24 March) included visits to Mr. Kuznetsov and to Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, and, in the afternoon, to Nikita S. Khrushchev, First Secretary of the Communist Party of the Soviet Union and Member of the Presidium of the Supreme Soviet of the USSR.

Mr. Kuznetsov is giving a luncheon for the Secretary-General today, and Foreign Minister Gromyko, tomorrow.

* *** *