My dear Hammarskjöld,

Some of us who have known you at various moments in your life would like to have a chance to meet you for a few minutes while you are here briefly in Cambridge. I have arranged with Dennis Robertson that, if it suits you, a few of us shall meet you in his room in Trinity at about 5.30. The Vice-Chancellor has assured me that from his point of view that suits very well. I do hope that this will suit you also and that you will not regard it as a great imposition. We like to remember occasionally that there were moments when you were an economist here in Cambridge among economists.

Dennis Robertson tells me that he will come and collect you at the Master's Lodge in Trinity and show you where his room is to be found.

Yours sincerely,

Austin Robinson
