Dear Mr. Weisgals,

May I on my return to New York thank you once again for the most pleasant lunch we had with you while visiting the Weisman Institute.

I was very much interested to see the various buildings of the Institute. We are all impressed by the research work that is being carried on there in such a highly qualified manner. You may rightly be proud of the achievements of the Institute and of its promise for the future.

Sincerely yours,

Dag Hammarskjöld
Secretary-General
