29 June 1955

Dear President Reed,

Had it not been for the accumulation of events in the last fortnight due to the celebration of the Tenth Anniversary of the signing of the United Nations Charter, you would have received already long ago my very best thanks for the pleasant day I spent with you at Johns Hopkins University and for the tribute to the United Nations work which was implied in the degree you so kindly conferred upon me.

As I told you I always appreciate highly opportunities to get in touch with the academic life in this country. I liked especially the atmosphere at your campus which struck even one who was but a superficial observer as, in great harmony, showing the dignity of academic traditions and the free and pleasant spirit of liberal intellectualism in the finest sense of the word.

I much appreciated this opportunity to get personally in touch with you and your colleagues and I shall always remember the experience you gave me with great gratitude and pleasure.
