Tenth Anniversary

17 March 1955

I have considered the subject referred to in your memorandum of 14 March that I should give a 10th Anniversary speech on 25 April at Geneva. Quite apart from the fact that it would cost me two extra days which I may find it difficult to afford, I don't believe I should make that statement as the timing strikes me as too artificial to provide an excuse for the somewhat unexpected step of making the first contribution to the anniversary from Geneva.
