The Australian Mission to the United Nations presents its compliments to the Secretary-General of the United Nations and has the honour to inform the Secretary-General that the Australian Government looks forward with pleasure to the Secretary-General's forthcoming visit to Australia. The Mission is instructed to convey to the Secretary-General an invitation from His Excellency, the Governor-General of the Commonwealth of Australia, for the Secretary-General to stay at Government House, Canberra, during his visit. The Governor-General also wishes to offer hospitality at Government House to any U.N. officials accompanying the Secretary-General on his visit and the Mission would appreciate early advice in this connection.

The Mission is further instructed to suggest to the Secretary-General that he may find it more convenient to travel direct to Canberra on the night of 12th February, 1956, rather than stay overnight in Sydney.
